from Michael Gray to Everyone:

If we ARE lower time, that seems to refute the possibility that we are a soul submerged under mistaken impressions. So who wakes up?

from Karin Tommack to Everyone:

Why does the self-experience that things are going more my way (page 143) - when we engage in the TSK vision? Is it the first step of opening - loosening up?

from Michael Gray to Everyone:

Does thinking things through reach the limits to the capacity of thought--like reaching the edge of the ocean? Or is it more opening thought itself to its capacity to go more deeply while remaining thought?

from haywardf to Everyone:

my position in the room defines the view and the view defines the position from klaus noldes to Everyone:

the senses are our tools of interaction. i feel that mostly with seeing from Caroline Sherwood to Everyone:

But how does position and view relate to time?

from Eliana Kalaf (privately):

The experience changes when I let the objects and the room interact with me. The experience is more lighter from David Filippone to Everyone:

Become aware of the flux, of the interconnectedness of all I encounter

from Michael Gray to Everyone:

Encountering things feels like responding to their invitation to come into their orbit. Appreciation amounts to saying thank you for the invitation.

from john brossard to Everyone:

Time can penetrate any space; space has dimension because of time and interactions are that power of exploring space that time can infinitely do

from Remco Wernert to Everyone:

Everything I do seems to be an interaction. Even imagination or doing nothing is a representation of all that's going on in/through me from Eliana Kalaf to Everyone:

Everything changes when I let the room and the objects interact with me. Things becomes lighter
