

Chat Notes - April 27, 2014 Phone Session

from Ron to Everyone:

One of the most valuable contributions of TSK is how it illuminates the temporality of the self and structure of dissatisfaction/limits

from Ron to Everyone:

Good point. Yes.

from Ron to Everyone:

Yea modular

from Soudabeh Azizi to Everyone:

That (polar Knowledge way) can be said is like direct experience too?!

from Ron to Everyone:

Yea because it takes a world as given

from ken to Everyone:

Fiction as construct, a constricting construct?

from Ron to Everyone:

Yea how would you know it was a direct experience except only after the fact

from ken to Everyone:

Knowledge as 'behind' time.

from ken to Everyone:

What about a broader, more inclusive time?

from Ron to Everyone:

Mental formations precede contact and perception

from ken to Everyone:

An imprint that sets up the footprint?

from Ron to Everyone:

Polar knowledge assumes a world out there as given

from Ron to Everyone:

Why bare attention is a myth!!!

from ken to Everyone:

Clothes come quickly.

from Soudabeh Azizi to Everyone:

Thank you

from Ron to Everyone:

Seems practice based on polar knowledge is anti intellectual and antinomian.

from ken to Everyone:

Yet spellcheck is often wildly inept.

from ken to Everyone:

My last loses the stream we are swimming.

from Ron to Everyone:

Therapeutic at best

from Ron to Everyone:

Pure experience provides therapeutic relief from the self's ruminations

from Michael G (privately):

The tree of knowledge as viewed in the Garden of Eden story, which makes Adam and Eve feel naked, is an early polar knowledge expose.

from ken to Everyone:

Ralph Ellison is great on different stories.

from Ron to Everyone:

A self censorship

from Ron to Everyone:

No.

from Soudabeh Azizi to Everyone:

Does time disappears means that multi dimension aspect of different times disappears?

from Philip Gold (privately):

The self holds a only-one-version fictional remembrance of the past and hinges onto an only-one-version of all the infinite possible futures? Living a one-dimensional view of life that exists in an infinite dimensional reality?

from Michael G (privately):

T, S & K vanishing feels like water under the ice, blue sky above the clouds. They are still there, not seen.
