

Chat Notes - March 2 Phone Call

from David Filippone to Everyone:

Do you mean just copy those sections or write about our experiences with them?

from Michael G to Everyone:

This week's assigned reading from TSK is page 40-42? Should we also read these early pages?

from John B to Everyone:

What pages exactly - sorry if I missed that. From page 3 to ?

from Michael G to Everyone:

We read TSK 3-10 on 11/03//13 (week 1, Session 2)

from Soudabeh Azizi to Everyone:

It is fair to put it into language in this way:

from haywardf to Everyone:

Certainly seems so regarding appearances in mental or emotional space...to see this in physical space seems to require a longer span of time and knowing

from Soudabeh Azizi to Everyone:

That there is a Basic Space that all events take place in my mind... whether in a dream or imagination or ordinary reality...

from Michael G to Everyone:

Boris Pasternak quotes a Russian proverb, "Life is not as simple as crossing a field." Perhaps because we forget that we are the field and everything that arises is like clouds sailing across an open blue sky?

from ken to Everyone:

The that I reflected on was my jaw, to the side of the felt impression, a ghost image of jaw arose. The first impression vanished into space, the second gather substantiality. How fleeting, this substance!

from klaus noldes to Everyone:

if there is only space there is no space for "real" obstacles any more

from Michael G to Everyone:

Soudii-- are we fielding fly balls in a field of dreams?

from John B to Everyone:

This focus on space takes the self out of the center. This creates an experience of 'what is this basis of space, experientially?'
