

Chat Notes February 9, 2014

from Center for Creative Inquiry to Everyone: No class next week. Next class in two weeks from eliana to Everyone:

I don't understand the difference between model and vision. Can you explain?

from Michael G to Everyone:
Vision draws us off the couch and out the door. Models keeps us seated and we don't see the door??

from Remco Wernert to Everyone:
do you have another word for vision that has the same meaning? In dutch and german it's difficult to find a good translation that means the same as the english word vision. The dutch 'visie' is more like a plan for the future and the german subtitle of the tsk book is very german ;-)

from Bruce to Everyone:
A friend, Bonnitta Roy, sometimes uses the word View (capitalized) to refer to the operative deep structure of our understanding and our experience, to be contrasted with model or paradigm which is more formal, and typically more limited or 'applied'

from Michael G to Everyone:
Vision=waking up to previously unseen possibilities=seeing ourselves in a new light from haywardf to Everyone:

a new vision offers a new way of being

from Remco Wernert to Everyone:
aufbruch zu neuen Dimensionen der Erfahrung von Welt und Wirklichkeit = german subtitle from soudabeh to Everyone:

A way of being?

from John B to Everyone:
Certain physicists would say they have a vision of reality - do they live it? Are we able to live it by reading their vision? Indigenous cultures also have visions of reality that are lived in many cases. Could we say models become sub-conscious and visions stay conscious and dynamic?

from Bruce to Everyone:
Another writer whose name I forget says that models and programs seldom transform the world. To do that takes the River of Vision.

from klaus noldes to Everyone:
it's also a new sound of reality, a new smell taste and feel of reality

from Philip Gold to Everyone:

A very, very deep feeling/certainty of how things are or should be or will be...?

from allan fix (privately):
How do you spell Hank van der ...???

from Philip Gold to Everyone:
Vision is a gut feeling whereas model is a head thing..

.
from Bruce to Everyone:
LOL. :-)

from Michael G to Everyone:
Vision is also the golden note deep in the forest that bids us enter, the tastes and smells of spring after a long dank winter.

from klaus noldes to Everyone:
that`s a point of transition, the space between thoughts, openness

from soudabeh to Everyone:
It is moving... it is dynamic

from klaus noldes to Everyone:
it`s exciting to imagine one could stay there

from soudabeh to Everyone:
children are mostly live like that

from Michael G to Everyone:
Our past deserves to be honored if it delivers us to a state of greater understanding.