from Soudabeh Azizi to Everyone:

Is clarity 'knowing with utmost certainty' almost intuitive gut knowing with out doubt?

from ken mckeon to Everyone:

Does clarity resist being hooked into?

from haywardf to Everyone:

is clarity "clear light" and more like space?

from Michael to Everyone:

Are the obscurations to clarity entirely on the side of our perception and understanding? Or is clarity dimmed and obscured in the field itself--in the entire realm in which we live? If the Body of Knowledge is essentially an embodiment of clarity, would it be possible for us to be clear in our being by virtue of appreciation and presence? Or do these questions reflect a mistaken separation into subject and object and the distance between them?

from Ron to Everyone:

Maybe the latter? Who becomes clear ?

from Ron to Everyone:

Yea easy way out. Mind does not exist.

from Soudabeh Azizi to Everyone:

this seems related to coexistence...

from Soudabeh Azizi to Everyone:

Paradox can coexist...

from ken mckeon to Everyone:

The notion of read-out. Is helpful here. So convincing , so certainly complete and true...and then a vanishing, a never was or could be...and then...how does then operate? What knowing operates? I can never be completely sure. Why be anything? Clear about is sort of a silly phrasing. Now. clarity.

from haywardf to Everyone:

could we say that all appearances are the body of knowledge, Is Knowledge is the clarity that allows appearance.

from Michael to Everyone:

Everything is vibration (sluggish for physical, fast for mental, etc) also resolves the split between matter and mind, but I seem to have misplaced the vibratory body that allows me to live there.

from Ron to Everyone:

What page is that on again?

from Soudabeh Azizi to Everyone:

It seems that what you are talking about is talked about on page 450 first paragraph.

From Ron to Everyone:

Yea clarity is already clear. The more we as an agent think we need to make something clear we will remain far removed from clarity, yet even in such confusion, clarity is shining.

from Ron to Everyone:

Breath page reference

from ken mckeeon to Everyone:

Subject/object reversal is of huge help here!
