

Unity of Space

from Sacred Dimensions of Time and Space pp. 62-64

Beneath the surface of separate appearances, everything in the universe connects to space, heart to heart. All edges are united by deep lines of space. When space opens, head and heart join together.

Space moves within us, and we ourselves move within space. We are always opening to space, and space is always open for us. If we understand this much about space, time manifests differently, with a more allowing rhythm.

United with space, what transitions could we fear? What ups and downs of time could disrupt our joy? In the warm openness of space, learned meanings and imposed purposes give way to spontaneous nourishment. Time's rigid rhythms melt toward fluidity and flexibility, choices abound, and knowledge has ample time to see. Eagerly, thoughts and senses explore what space means.

In the house of being embodied, all can become space. Once we enter and abide there, the field-momentum of color, texture, and quality radiate deep vibrancy and warmth—the feel of space coming closer, inviting us, surrounding us on all sides, in all directions. The field fills with light that shines within all color and forms.
